Room: HG 162

CASE

In 2010, the appellate regional labour court for Berlin and Brandenburg decided that the Freie Arbeiter*innen-Union (FAU) Berlin lacked the assertiveness and social power required for collective bargaining.

ANALYSIS

In line with the tradition of feminist judgements methodology, Prof. Eva Kocher and Joanna Bronowicka consider how the knowledge represented in labour law neglects important social aspects of collective organisation. We will discuss whether an alternative decision could have been reached.
